

Talkie Movie Big Hit At Tinley Park

The first talking movie ever shown in Tinley Park, drew a packed house last Saturday, both at the afternoon and evening performances.

The pictures shown were perfect and many favorable comments were heard about them. The talking and musical parts were very clear and distinct and were easily heard all over the large hall.

The older folks enjoyed the show as much as the kiddies did. The Mickey Mouse cartoon and a comic thriller delighted the kiddies.

The Pathe News Reel and the big feature picture "Traveling Husbands", pleased the grownups very much.

Over five hundred persons from not only Tinley Park, but from the adjoining towns and country side, attended the afternoon matinee and evening shows.

The business people of Tinley were mightily well pleased with the show as it brought many people to town and stimulated business.

Mayor Wm. Mohr warmly endorses the show and there is a big demand for a regular weekly talking movie picture show. These shows bring people to Tinley Park, provide wholesome entertainment at a reasonable price and are an asset to the community.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Illinois Press Association

Prof. R. E. Hieronymus, community adviser for the state of Illinois, will give an illustrated address on, "Places of Scenic and Historic Interest in Illinois," before the Business and Professional Women's club of Springfield on Monday evening, March 21. Members of the art extension committee and interested friends are invited to hear him. The special committee handling this affair consists of Miss Margaret Duane, chairman of committee; Miss Anna May Price, Mrs. H. Y. Shamel, Mrs. Stella Westenberg, Aubrey Cribb, L. H. Henricks, Elmer Kneale, and H. L. Williamson. Doctor Hieronymus will give an address that will be very much worthwhile and all who are interested in historic and scenic spots in Illinois should hear him.

A great responsibility rests upon Edward L. Ryerson, Jr., Chicago, as chairman of the new Illinois emergency relief commission which is charged with working out the arrangements for the distribution of the $18,750,000 appropriated by the general assembly. Mr. Ryerson is possessed of rare judgment which will be a valuable asset to the commission. He has announced that the commission will deal through the county boards in meeting the local relief needs of the counties and that the money will be distributed on the basis of the greatest need and the ability of the counties to repay in proportion to the amount they receive.

The following men are candidates for governor of Illinois, subject to the Democratic primary, April 12: Joseph L. Burke, Chicago; Bruce A. Campbell, Belleville; R. S. Douglas, Chicago; Leo Patrick Dwyer, Chicago; Oliver Wendell Holmes, Chicago; Henry Horner, Chicago; Michael L. Izoe, Chicago; Andrew W. Sullivan, Chicago.

Sturdy blows are being struck at the practice of hoarding money in times of need. Headed by Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, as chairman, the Citizens' Reconstruction organization has started a national movement that is drawing millions of dollars out of hiding and doing much to restore confidence. In an address before the Illinois Press association, Colonel Knox said that during the first three weeks of the activities of the Citizens' Reconstruction organization, the deposits in the country's banks exceeded withdrawals by $20,000,000 weekly. Colonel Knox's spirit of justice manifests itself in his statement that this movement knows no partisanship. It is neither Democratic nor Republican. He calls upon everyone to assist in carrying on this great work. It is fortunate that a man such as Colonel Knox is at the head of the organization. His ability, energy, justice, and unselfishness will carry the work through to a complete victory. Dean C. M. Thompson of the school of commerce of the University of Illinois is in charge of the down-state section of the organization.

The following men are candidates for United States senator from Illinois, subject to the Democratic primary: Thomas A. Cummings, Chicago; William Dieterich, Beardstown; Clarence H. Kavanaugh, Wilmette; Emmet Kennedy, LaGrange; Scott W. Lusac, Havana; John B. Monroe, Chicago; Thomas F. O'Donnell, Chicago; Edward Sullivan, Chicago; William Young, Chicago.

Particular emphasis will be placed on the financial situation of libraries in the state, and the need for wise planning and efficient expenditure of funds at their disposal. The meetings are scheduled as follows: March 4, Highland Park; March 7, River Forest; March 11, Paxton; March 18, Carthage; March 21, Decatur; March 23, Peoria; April 1, East St. Louis; April 7, Carbondale; April 8, Fairfield; April 14, Morris; April 15, Geneseo; May 6, Rockford.

Tuberculosis is more prevalent in girls in their teens than in boys of the same age, according to a study of 3,000 University of Illinois students. Dr. J. Howard Beard of the University health service points out that this increase is due partly to the starving, style, and speed which decrease bodily resistance. He says that disease is the bonus received when vigor and strength are exchanged for fads, fashion, and frolic.

According to Wesley P. Flint, chief entomologist of the Natural History survey, ants will soon become troublesome in fields and lawns, but they need be no problem to the informed housewife and gardener. They may be easily exterminated by either gassing the colony or by providing an abundance of poison for their workers to carry into the colony. Directions for handling all kinds of exterminating media and formulae for the baits will be furnished free upon application to the Natural History survey at Urbana.

The following men are candidates for governor of Illinois, subject to the Republican primary, April 12: Edward J. Brundage, Chicago; Oscar E. Carlstrom, Alton; Herbert E. Clayton, Morris; Omer N. John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Bad Language

A new family had moved into the neighborhood and Jack, accompanied by his dog, made a call. He came home disgusted and said:

"Mother, I wouldn't have anything to do with that lady, she says cussing words. When I went on the porch she said: 'Don't let that dirty cur come on my clean porch.'"

Lesson for March 27

JESUS RISES FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29.

GOLDEN TEXT—But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Living Again.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Conqueror.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Serving the Risen Lord.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fact and Meaning of the Resurrection.

1. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ or give any proof other than that the tomb was empty, and that Jesus had repeatedly manifested himself after the tomb was found empty. To see the body of Christ with a spear-thrust and nail prints and the empty tomb was all that faith needed.

1. The testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1, 2). This woman, out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to him for his kindness to her, she went early to the tomb even "when it was yet dark."

2. Personal investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3-10). The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought with breathless haste so moved John and Peter that they both ran to investigate. When John came to the empty tomb, he gazed into it, but when Peter came he entered it. This investigation convinced them of the reality of the resurrection. The removal of the stone from the sepulchre, the arrangement of the grave clothes, convinced them that the enemy could not have done this.

11. The Manifestations of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18).

a. Mary weeping at the empty tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home, but Mary could not. She stood weeping. Home was nothing to her while her Lord was missing. Earnest love need not to weep long for Jesus is found of those who love him. She should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty, for the empty tomb was eloquent proof of his messiahship and deity.

b. Mary questioned by the angels (vv. 12, 13). Through her tears, she saw angels at the tomb, who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow.

c. Jesus revealed himself to Mary (vv. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. She did not recognize him in his resurrection body, but his voice was familiar to her. As soon as he called her by name, she recognized him and fell at his feet weeping.

d. Jesus forbade her to touch him (v. 17). This showed that she was coming into a new relationship to him.

e. Mary's testimony (v. 18). She told the disciples that she had seen the Lord.

2. To the disciples (vv. 19-29). He appeared to several of his disciples at different times during the day. This is the first appearance to the disciples as a body. The rumors of his several appearances on that day caused the disciples to assemble to talk over the matter. For fear of the Jews, they met in a private room and barred the door. While they were discussing the strange happenings of the day, the Lord mysteriously appeared to them.

a. When Thomas was absent (vv. 19-23).

(1) His message of peace (v. 19). This revealed his attitude toward them. He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion.

(2) He showed his hands and his side (v. 20). Having calmed their fears, he gave them unmistakable evidence of his resurrection.

(3) He commissioned them (v. 21). "As my Father hath sent me even so send I you." This commission was not simply to a class, as the eleven, but to all Christians (Luke 24:33).

(4) He bestowed the Holy Spirit upon them (v. 22). This was their equipment. Only as empowered by the Holy Ghost can one go forward as a successful witness for Christ.

(5) The disciples' authority (v. 23). This authority was not by virtue of office, but by virtue of having the Holy Ghost. This spiritual gift gave spiritual discernment to know who had or who had not repented and consequently to pronounce pardon or withhold it.

b. When Thomas was present (vv. 24-29).

(1) The victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-28). The Lord graciously supplied the evidence which Thomas needed. The Lord does not rebuke those who sincerely seek light.

(2) Greater blessing for those who believe, not having seen (v. 29).

WORDS OF WISDOM

Kind words produce their own image in men's souls, and a beautiful image it is.—Pascal.

In the home: Order is its beauty, contentment is its blessing, hospitality is its glory, Godliness is its crown.

Blessed is the man who, having nothing to say, abstains from giving us wordy evidence of the fact.—George Eliot.

SNAPS Into It!

He's a success in business, it is true. But at home he's the worst kind of failure. Can't get along with his wife... easily upset... attacks of nerves... always tired out.

All this could easily be avoided with the aid of Fellows' Syrup, the perfect tonic. Man, how it peeps up appetite and vigor! How it helps ease frazzled tempers and build up real energy. Just a single bottle may do you a world of good. Find out for yourself, by asking your druggist for a bottle of genuine Fellows' Syrup.

FELLOWS' SYRUP

With the Others

A lady once sent the manuscript of a book she had written to Doctor Johnson, asking him for his opinion of it, and mentioning that she had several other irons in the fire.

"Put this with the other irons," was Johnson's reply.—Montreal Star.

when "left-overs" can be safely saved in an electric refrigerator. Its controlled cold keeps foods healthfully fresh for days. Thousands of women are discovering that it is good business to invest in electric refrigeration. By practically eliminating food spoilage, it saves nickels, dimes or quarters every day—actually helps to pay for itself! Sports Notes

The basketball games scheduled for Monday against Matteson were called off due to an outbreak of scarlet fever there.

Robert Beagley was elected captain of next year's Orland High School basketball team at an election held last week. Robert is a husky freshman who shows great promise. Although he failed to win a major letter this year, he was developing rapidly at the end of the season and his team mates showed their confidence in him by awarding him this honor. In addition to his basketball work, he is a standout on the baseball team where his work at the hot corner is fine always.

Baseball is now being looked to at Orland High School. Candidates for the squad are working out indoors under the direction of Mr. White. A well balanced squad appears to be the outlook. In the infield, "Swede" Uthe is certain of first base. He is a fine fielder, a good waiter with the bat and is perfectly at home in his position. Bill Newcomb, a fielder with an iron arm and steady peg, is certain of another position. Although his fielding alone would entitle him to a job, it is his value with the bat which makes him especially valuable since he is a constant threat to the opposing pitcher. He will undoubtedly be placed in the cleanup position in the batting order. Billy Heiting, a veteran of two years experience, and a reliable field er will be assigned to second in all probability. To complete a well rounded, consistent infield there is Bob Beagley who has a beautiful peg from third. Bob has worked hard to break a habit of stepping away from the plate and ought to develop into a dependable hitter.

In the outfield the standouts are Earl Reish, Jim Pomeroy, Leo Putz, and Gordon Kay, all of them good fly chasers and steady stick men.

The battery should cause no trouble. On the catching end, there are Chris Keuch, a youngster who has the knack of hanging onto any ball which comes within a couple of blocks of him and who is scared of nothing behind the bat, and Gus Zerbs, a very hard worker who is hard to shake. Eldon Nicolai shouldered the biggest part of the pitching burden last season and it seems as if he will be worked hard again. In case he needs relief, Bill Newcomb, Bob Beagley and Gus Zerbs could step in to tide over the emergency.

Buzzard dropped down, swung around. As the plane sailed over a second time, Alan drew the island up to him studying the tent sharply, he saw a movement of the flap-front and distinguished a man's face, upturned, peering at them.

One bandit there at least! But the others?

A guess shot into his mind: those others had probably gone hunting for caribou over east at the foute.

As though that watcher there below realized what this ominous circling meant and had become panicky, a puff of white, a single puff, burst from the flap-front. Confident the man was alone and the others were gone, Alan decided to take this bandit alive. He needed information about the others, and information about that pack of furs to clear Dave MacMillan.

While Buzzard circled at a safe distance, he tore a page from a memo book and printed a message:

"If you shoot again, we'll splatter you and that island into the lake with our machine guns. Stand out in the clear. No weapons on you. Don't try any crooked move after we light."

He wrapped the message around a monkey-wrench and handed it to Buzzard. From wartime practice of dropping "eggs" on ammunition dumps and second-trench Flammenwerfer and camouflaged batteries of Krupp 79's east of Verdun, with no aerial sights except two nails and a string along the fuselage, Buzzard was a good judge of speed, altitude and the right split-instant to release. Whirling over the island, a few hundred yards up, he planted the missile within a dozen paces of the flap-front.

As they looked back they saw the man run out to it, read the message, hesitate a moment, and then raise his left arm, waving something white.

A pistol-shot off the island the plane lighted. Buzzard stayed in the machine. Alan and Bill got out the canvas canoe, slipped automatically into their pockets, took rifles prominently in hand and went ashore.

While Bill searched the bandit for a hidden revolver, Alan looked at him curiously. He was a strange character to find in this country. Slant-eyed, his skin olive, he looked as though he had oriental blood in his veins. The rag he had waved in token of surrender was a sling. His right arm dangled limp at his side.

Alan demanded, "Are you the fellow we hit in that fight?"

"Chink" Woolley nodded.

"Are those other men out hunting?" Alan asked. "Or where?"

Woolley batted his eyes slowly, as though taking thought. "Huntin', yes," he managed.

"Which way?"

"North-east."

"That probably means they went southwest," Alan remarked, and his short laugh was not pleasant. "You lie natural and easy-like, but it won't get by with us. We've nailed too many liars in our time. I want to know who this party of yours is, where they came from, how they got into this country, how they know their way about in it. I want to know how that pack of otter pelts got into Trader MacMillan's storage shed. I want to know the man who killed Jimmy Montgomery there on the Midnight Sun. Now get busy."

He clicked the safety on his automatic and brought his elbow up against his side.

Chink Woolley trembled, his knees shook, he wilted. He guessed that this man must be the Baker fellow, the sergeant terrible, whom Meti Andre always mentioned in lowered voice. Those hypnotic gray eyes seemed to be boring through him. That heavy automatic was tilted to make his next lie the last. And if he turned king's evidence, he might escape the noose.

It was a strange story that Alan and Bill listened to, there on the island in the heart of Many Waters.

Eighteen months ago, on a whaler in Beaufort sea, the five whites, excluding the half-breed Andre whom they picked up later, had "run a buck" under Jensen's instigation, but were overpowered by the captain and rest of the crew. Flung ashore with the skipper's sulphurous good wishes at bleak Demarcation point on the Arctic coast, they made their way across the Romanzoff's to the new placer fields in the Kayukuk headwaters. They came too late to get worthwhile claims; and they discovered, too, that "hawking" in the perpetually-frozen subsoil was even harder work than whaling.

It was Jensen, brooding over their predicament, who conceived the idea that it was easier to find gold which already had been found than to thaw a hole thirty feet down to black sand and bedrock and then maybe get nothing. It was Jensen who allayed their fears and dangled the golden lure in front of their eyes till their mouths watered and they were ready for anything he planned.

Andre the half-breed was a find. He fitted into the party like a key into a lock. They were crassly ignorant of the country; they were tyros when it came to traveling, hiding, living in the bush. But Andre the breed was bush-wise as a weasel and water-wise as a muskrat, and he knew the whole north country from Roes Welcome to Point Barrow as he knew the palm of his hand.

It was Andre who had brought the party into this strange country, by back rivers and untraversed trails, avoiding all sight of men, so that they seemed to have dropped from the sky. It was Andre who suggested the place of attack on the Midnight Sun, and the Thal-Azzah as a place to hide in after the swoop and robbery. And it was 'breed Andre's sharp-speaking Savage that drilled Jimmy Montgomery through the heart.

Alan Baker breathed a little harshly. He ordered, "Describe that 'breed.'" And he added, "So there will be no mistake when I meet him."

Woolley described his meti confederate. Alan nodded curtly. After a few moments' silence, he spoke again: "Now about Trader MacMillan. How did that pack of furs get in his shed?" "Jensen put it dere."

"Why?"

Woolley did not know all the details, but from hints Jensen had dropped he was able to piece the story together pretty well.

Several years ago at Hershell Island, that gathering place for whalers, Indians, traders, Eskimos and Arctic explorers, Jensen had run afoul of Dave MacMillan. He had come ashore from a whaler, hungry for drink and hungry for woman's company after eight months of following the herds. He had found the drink, and in a whisky haze had started to make rough love to fifteen-year-old Joyce MacMillan.

Dave MacMillan fell upon him. For years now Jensen had been nursing his hairy chin reminiscently where MacMillan's hard fist had caught him; and his ears still rang with the derisive jeers of those who saw him dog-whipped down across the swells and over the shingle to the whaler.

"I'll Not Kill You if You Tell."

He had never forgotten the MacMillan girl nor the incident of that snowy October day. The incident had smoldered in his vengeful soul; and when his party passed the trading post, it had flared out. It was a neat stroke, putting that comparatively worthless bale of furs in the shed of the man who had dog-whipped him. He had counted on the trader discovering them, wondering about them, innocently calling the attention of the police to them, and getting into hot water when he failed to explain how they got there.

The revelation of Dave MacMillan's complete innocence was no surprise to Alan but merely a proof that his and Joyce's instinctive belief had been correct. Now he could know that in buying out of service he had saved the reputation and possibly the very life of Joyce's father. Under Haskell's tyranny he could never have vindicated Dave. In his own way he had planned, and had fought through to this partial triumph.

Writing down the essential points of the confession, he forced Woolley to make his mark on the paper, with himself and Bill as witnesses. He made a second copy for Bill, in case something happened to Bill or him. Then he demanded of Woolley:

"You say those other men went hunting. When are you expecting them back?"

Woolley did not know. He seemed strangely hesitant. Fidgeting uneasily, he would glance up at Alan and then away, as though he had something to tell but was afraid to tell it.

Alan saw his agitation. He demanded: "What're you stumbling over? Cooking up some lie?"

The man wetted his dry twitching lips. "You'll not kill me if I tell you de truth—where dey went? You may be can git back dere on de Alooska in time to save de girl."

"On the Alooska—in time to save the girl?"—Alan jerked as though a bullet had sung past his throat. His face went suddenly pale. "You mean Joyce MacMillan? What about her? Tell it, or by G—d I'll choke it out of you! Open up. What about her? What do you mean—in time to save her? I'll not kill you if you tell."

Woolley stammered: "Dey went down de Alooska to git her. It's Jensen's idee. He's aimin' to take her along on de escape and keep her for himself. He's all burnin' about dat girl. . . ."

His shaky voice trailed off. He shrank back in quivering dread from the expression that had come into Baker's eyes.

For a little while, a few moments only, Alan stared unseeing out across the waters of the great blue lake. To wait here, until the bandits came back? Not that; they'd be three days and nights on the return trip. . . . Joyce would be helpless all that time, in the power of the man who was 'all burnin' about dat girl." They had left only thirty-odd hours ago. He stood a chance of beating them to the trading post. . . .

Whirling on Bill he ordered: "You stay here. You attend to this end of it. Buzzard and I will attend to the other. We'll go after them in the plane. There's a chance we can get to the trading post before they do. You'll have a rifle extra. They're intending to come back here after the loot. If anything happens to Buzzard and me, you'll be left, you'll have a chance at them. It'll be all up to you."

He turned on his heel and ran down to the canoe and skirled out to the waiting plane.

"Get back to the Alooska, Buzzard! To Joyce's home!" He pleaded huskily. "For G—d's sake make it straight and fast!"

No one appeared at the doorway of the trading store. No one, with hair shimmering in the sun, came running down the path to greet them.

Their shouts at the landing brought no answer from a girl's lips or from old Pence. In some measure prepared, Alan called Joyce's name as he strode into the trading hall. He called but once; he looked but once into her room.

Buzzard came running to him with a piece of paper in his hands. His face was lit with elation.

"Alan! Alan! Luckiest thing in our whole d—d lives! Look here, read this! Joyce and old Pence had left! Werent' here when that pack came! Went after caribou! Almost too good to be true!"

Alan grasped the note and read. It was in Joyce's fine swift handwriting. No doubt about that. It stated that she and old Pence had gone to Black Timber lake thirty miles north to get caribou and would be back in two days, in case a patrol happened past.

Alan studied the note for half a minute. His face did not relax.

"Yes, too good to be true," he commented slowly. "Don't you see?—this note is addressed to Constable Larry Young. Why did Joyce do that? She knows Larry is not patrolling, knows he is at Endurance all shot up; and she knows we know it. Don't you see what she tried to do? It was her only way of telling us that something was wrong. She had to write this note as they dictated it, but she tricked them."

"It's so, it's so," Buzzard agreed. "She tricked them under their very eyes, and counted on us to understand."

From room to room—Joyce's room, her father's, the kitchen, the trading hall, the ground outside—Alan went carefully, noting signs, reading the story of what had happened.

Nothing about the post was disturbed. There were no signs of a struggle or fight. Joyce's light rifle still hung on a peg in her room. Its barrel inside was clean and shiny; the weapon had not been fired. Joyce must have been surprised and overpowered without a chance to fight back.

At the clearing edge Alan found a trampled spot in a thicket where five men had lain and watched. Kneeling down, examining the broken twigs, the wilted leaves, the crushed nettles, he read that all this had happened, three hours ago and that the criminals were thirty of forty miles up the spruce-buried Alooska, with Joyce their prisoner.

About the whole post there was only one telltale sign of something dark and sinister. In their hurry to get away, the bandits had overlooked that sign. Beside a stump in the sunlit clearing, Alan picked up old Pence's story-stick. Once or twice he had wondered what they had done with that old white-haired wail. They would not burden themselves with him, nor would they turn him free, to report and bring the police hot on their trail. How had they dealt with old Pence?

As he picked up the stick, he saw a brownish-red stain on one end of it, a crimson splash already turning dark; and a few hoary-white hairs clinging to the wood. And this story-stick which old Pence had been whittling at, carving clumsy bas-relief scenes from his own life—scenes of mining camps, of the fur-path and lonely gold trails, of dog teams and packhorses, of broad-shouldered men bent under heavy portage loads and of women with a crude beauty of face and figure—this story-stick of his life, from its rounded handle to its tapering end, was completed now.

Poverty Defined
The following definition of poverty is that of Dr. Robert W. Kelso, sociologist: "Poverty is that condition of living in which the individual, whether from lack of means or the failure to apply them, consistently fails to maintain himself and those properly dependent upon him at a plane of living high enough to insure continuous bodily and mental fitness to carry on permanently in his occupation and locality, and which allows him and them to live and function in their community with decency and self-respect."

Be Philosophical
The chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us.—Aughey.

Old and New Faith

Blended in Japan
When you understand Japan, "heathendom" will never have quite the old significance again. The future of Christianity there lies not above other faiths, but beside them, intricately entwined.

When Japan takes on the new, she never utterly neglects the old; and just as Christianity made her own the ineradicable superstitions of ancient countries, so Buddhism and Christianity alike incorporate customs and beliefs held too tenaciously to be rooted out.

A friend has told me, out of long and intimate experience with the Japanese, the story of a young man of noble blood who very early became a Christian. He married the daughter of a samurai and she embraced her husband's faith.

Years followed of happiness, then of deep anxiety and death. Their eldest child, a beautiful girl not seven years old, died after a devastating illness. My friend, bound to the young couple by bonds of old and close affection, went to the house of death. The stricken father met him at the door, the smile of welcome as ever on his lips, while in silence he drew back the shoji of the inner room.

There was the mother, kneeling, and beside her the dead child, white as the pear blossoms without. In the child's right hand the mother had placed her Bible, and across her breast lay her father's sword, naked and shining.

The Word of God was there to guide her to a better world. But while her spirit groped through mortal confines the rustless blade of the samurai made everything of evil keep its terrified distance.—Ellery Sedgwick, in the Atlantic Monthly.

Polynesians Were Travelers

America in ancient times was not completely undiscovered as it is sometimes pictured. At least, the Indians of the South American coast had contacts with islanders of far-off Polynesia, according to Dr. R. B. Dixon, of Harvard university. An American plant, the sweet potato, found its way to Polynesia in pre-Columbian times, Doctor Dixon stated. Theories that Polynesian natives made voyages of extreme length in their big boats must be discounted after careful study of documentary evidence, said Doctor Dixon. He added, however, that the islanders did make voyages of 1,500 miles, which would have carried them to the American coast.

EASTER—A Day of Many Meanings

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

It's an "early Easter" this year, for Easter Sunday falls on March 27. Last year it came on April 3 and next year it will come on April 16. For all the red letter days on our calendar Easter is the most variable. The only thing certain about it is that it always comes on a Sunday and it is limited to either one of two months, March and April. Then there are other limits, too, that is, it cannot come earlier than March 22 nor later than April 25.

Why all this variation in such an important annual festival? The reasons go back into ancient history.

The festival now known as Easter was celebrated by ancient Israel as the Passover for many centuries before the birth of Jesus Christ. It was based upon the events which took place when the Hebrews were saved from the destruction which was visited upon the Egyptians, as given in Exodus 12:27. The first Christians, being in the main Jews, continued for a long time to observe the Passover as well as other ancient ceremonies. But gradually these early followers of the Cross began to substitute the Christ for the paschal lamb of Israel in the Passover ceremonies.

Eventually there arose a difference of opinion between the Christians of Hebrew descent and those of Gentile descent as to the time when these ceremonies should be celebrated. Those of Hebrew descent declared that the day of the death of Jesus should be the date of the ending of the paschal fast, which in Hebrew rites, always was on the fourteenth day of the moon in the evening. Therefore the Easter festival, which followed, might fall on any day of the week. Those of Gentile descent, however, wanted the first day of the week, Sunday, to be the first day of the resurrection festival. Thus the Friday preceding would be observed as the date of the crucifixion without paying any attention to the day of the month, the fast continuing until midnight of Saturday.

The dispute over this point was complicated by the irregularities of the time of full moon in relation to the year. The Hebrew sacred year began at the instant of the vernal equinox, but this time is subject to slight changes due to the astronomical fact of perturbation of the motion of all bodies in the solar system. The Hebrews based their years on lunar changes, whereas we now determine the exact length of a year by the sun and stars, which is more accurate. It is notable that the ancient Hebrews always had trouble with their chronology because they based the beginning of each month on the first sight of the new moon.

The trouble was principally due to the fact that the moon revolves around the earth in 27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes and 11½ seconds, and the earth around the sun in 31,558,149 seconds. Therefore the moon makes 13.3687 revolutions to the earth's one. Full-moon times are also out of harmony with the spring equinox, and this fact caused trouble in determining time in ancient times. The result of all these complications was that by applying the Jewish rules to Easter, the dates of the crucifixion and the resurrection, two days which were supposed to be fixed for all time, varied constantly.

For 325 years the difficulty between the Christians of Jewish descent and those of Gentile descent continued. Not being able to decide the recurrence of Easter, the council of the early Christian church finally appealed to the astronomers in Alexandria, Egypt, for aid. However, the scientists were not of much assistance, for they had no lunar tables such as we now have, computed by master mathematicians. They attempted to make rules, but the variations of the full moon in reference to the year would not cause Easter to fall on Sunday any more than any other day. All wanted it to come on Sunday, so each nation celebrated to suit itself so that it would come on that day. Thus in A. D. 387 the Gauls celebrated Easter on March 21, in Italy it fell on April 18, and in Egypt it fell on April 25.

Eventually the selection of a certain Sunday was definitely fixed during the Sixth century A. D. It was designated as the Sunday between the fifteenth and twenty-first days of the moon in the first month of the Jewish lunar years. It was directed that the computation should be made according to the tables of Victorius of Aquitaine, introduced in 457 A. D. Because of the fact that Britain had ceased to be a part of the Roman empire, the Sixth century decree did not affect the British church at first, and it continued to calculate Easter on a basis previously approved at Rome. The matter was finally dis-

1. President Hoover greeting the crowd gathered for the annual "Easter egg rolling" on the lawn of the White House.
2. Sunrise services on Easter morning in the Garden of the Gods, near Colorado Springs, Colo.
3. The Easter lily, one of the loveliest of all Easter symbols.
4. The Hollywood Bowl, Hollywood, Calif., where an impressive Easter morning service is held every year.

posed of at a synod held at Whitby in Yorkshire in 664 A. D., after which the clergy of the British Isles conformed to the general practice of the western church.

Accordingly Easter is now observed by both the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches on the first Sunday after the full moon (or fourteenth day of the moon) on or next after March 21. So it cannot be earlier than March 22 nor later than April 25. Thus it is possible for the astronomers and mathematicians to tell in advance on what dates Easter will come each year, and they are now known for more than a century in advance.

That, of course, is based upon the assumption that our calendar will continue unchanged. But there is a possibility that some time within the next few years a new calendar system will be adopted and in that case Easter Sunday will be a fixed date instead of a variable one.

So, in case you're interested in knowing what will be the Easter dates for the next few years, here they are:

1933	April 16
1934	April 1
1935	April 21
1936	April 12
1937	March 28
1938	April 17
1939	April 9
1940	March 24
1941	April 13
1942	April 5
1943	April 25
1944	April 9
1945	April 1
1946	April 21
1947	April 6
1948	March 28
1949	April 17
1950	April 9

Just as Easter is now a variable date, so has it a variable meaning to many different people. To the child, who cannot grasp its religious significance, it means a day whose symbols are rabbits, little chickens and Easter eggs. To those children, too, who like to think of any festival time in terms of something good to eat, Easter time means candy eggs, candy rabbits and other candy symbols of the day, not to mention those fragrant, sugary piles of the mystically marked confection, known as hot cross buns.

How did a bakery product come to be associated with Easter anyway? It goes back to the days of the ancient Saxons who worshipped Easter as goddess of the dawn and benign giver of new life with the coming of the vernal equinox. That was long before they had ever heard of Christianity and the Resurrection. In their joy at the return of new life in the springtime they brought the Easter goddess their sweetest cakes, at the same time eating great numbers of them themselves.

They clung to this custom even after they had embraced Christianity. Some of the early Christian leaders were a bit dubious of preserving such a relic of a heathen religion but some tolerant person who was also a genius for compromise, suggested to the priests that they bless the pagan cakes, marking them with the cross. Thus the Saxon Easter biscuit was made fit for Christian consumption and for centuries afterwards it was felt that they were endowed with some special spiritual qualities. A few cross-buns baked on Good Friday not only would not mold, as would other bread, but if kept throughout the year they would be an efficient medicine for various ills when crumbled in a cup of water and thus taken into the body.

To most people Easter means a time for coming forth in new clothes and although some of our philosophers have bewailed the extravagance of the "Easter style parade" as a sign that we have lost the spiritual significance of the day in reality it is in keeping with the essential spirit of Easter, which is shared by Christian and pagan alike. It is the idea of "resurrection," of revived life after apparent death. It marks the climax of the year when all nature awakes from sleep, throws off the death-like chill of winter and beings to live anew. With all nature pointing the way by bedecking herself in new raiment, it is only natural that mankind should celebrate the surge of new life by putting on new apparel.

So when milady appears at church on Easter Sunday in a new frock and a new hat, it is not mere human vanity expressing itself. She puts them on because she must! She has responded to the fundamental instinct by responding thus to the call of spring, to the message of renewed life. There is an old British tradition that it is "good luck to wear something new on Easter day," but that is a mere outgrowth of the essential idea of the Eastertide.

Far as some of the symbols of Easter and their meanings for different people may seem to be removed from the essential spirit of Easter, they are in reality not so far removed. For all of them are based upon the idea of "resurrection" and if "resurrection" is the spirit and the message of Easter, then the inmost essence of that spirit can be summed up in the one word "immortality." If man can find an answer to the old, old question that has troubled him through the ages, the question "Does death end all?" he can find it in the message of Easter. It is reassurance that he does not face a hopeless task. Even if he did not have the comfort of his religion to help him arrive at that belief, he finds it in the mere fact of living.

Each day, each year and each lifetime he sees the cycle repeated. The sun comes up in the morning and goes down into darkness at night. But he knows that it will come up again the next morning. Each 24 hours he sees the miracle of resurrection. New life is manifest in the animal and vegetable kingdoms with each recurring spring. It ripens in the heat of summertime and mellows into maturity in the autumn, only to die in the cold of winter. But he knows that life will begin again next year. Each 12 months he sees the miracle of resurrection. A baby is born, passes through childhood, grown into youth, reaches man's estate and then declines into old age. What if the darkness of death is only a matter of a few years away? He has seen the recurring miracle of resurrection every 24 hours and every 12 months. Why should not man, reasoning logically from this evidence of which he is aware every day of his life, believe that the cycle of a lifetime includes a resurrection just as does the daily cycle and the yearly cycle? He does so believe and from that belief comes his belief in the life everlasting, in immortality.

Perhaps it would be more accurate to say he chooses to believe. For few men, of any, have ever solved the riddle of life to their utter satisfaction. They constantly grope for the truth, seeking, always seeking, the answer to the unsolved problems of life. They have the never-ending longing in their hearts for everlasting life and they choose to believe, and take comfort from the belief, that they shall have it.

So whether he be primitive man or modern, civilized man, whether he be Christian or heathen, the essential spirit of Easter, the message of Easter is the same—it is a message of hope, a message of joy and a promise and a fulfillment in one.

"SICK HEADACHE?"

It is not necessary to give-in to headaches. It is just a bit old-fashioned! The modern woman who feels a headache coming on at any time, takes some tablets of Bayer Aspirin and heads it off.

Keep Bayer Aspirin handy, and keep your engagements. Headaches, systemic pains, come at inconvenient times. So do colds. You can end them before they're fairly started if you'll only remember this handy, harmless form of relief. Carry it in your purse and insure your comfort while shopping; your evening's pleasure at the theatre. Those little nagging aches that bring a case of "nerves" by day are ended in a jiffy. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking Bayer Aspirin! You'll find these tablets always help. If you get real aspirin, you'll get real relief. In every package of genuine Bayer tablets are proven directions which cover headaches, colds, sore throat, toothache, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica, rheumatism, etc.

The tablets stamped Bayer won't fail you, and can't harm you. They don't depress the heart. They don't upset the stomach. So take them whenever you need them, and take enough to end the pain.

Prized Gray Hairs

Went Into Discard

A young advertising man has long been handicapped by the fact that, while young, he is not nearly so young as he looks. His youthfulness of appearance has often caused persons in authority—such as traffic policemen—to treat him with a degree of condescension rather painfully noticeable. His office boy, whose appearance is one of slightly premature maturity, is everywhere treated by subway guards, box office employees and garage attendants with infinitely more respect than he ever can achieve.

This persistent youthfulness has worried him, mildly, for ten years or more. It was, therefore, with something near real pleasure that he welcomed the first gray hairs. He envisioned himself as, at long length, attaining the dignity of appearance he had come to covet—partly because so many people absent-mindedly addressed him as "boy." The gray came along nicely. It spread along the sides of his head. He approached maturity. Then his wife, embarking on one of her periodical campaigns to smarten him up, insisted that he keep his hair cut shorter. He explained the need to the barber.

He emerged from the shop pleased with the idea that he now looked like an alert young executive. He dropped in at a soda fountain and sat waiting the busy dispenser. Finally the dispenser, a lad of about twenty, turned to him.

"And what is yours, young man?" he inquired.

Young BODIES DEMAND it!

The bodies of all growing children require certain essential vitamins. Important among these are Vitamins A and D, both of which are found abundantly in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. "A" helps youngsters—and their parents, as well—resist common colds-in-the-head. "D" aids children in growth and in the development of bones and teeth. In this emulsified form, cod liver oil is easy and pleasant for young and old to take. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representative, Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Inc., New York.
